Full disclosure: I love Gibson acoustic guitars. When I was a kid, my first “real guitar” was a Gibson LG 2. I love the historic look, the feel the and sound of a Gibson...everything about them. I’ve managed to arrange Montana factory tours for most of my staff and we keep a good selection of Gibson acoustics on hand, both new and vintage guitars, at all times. We have also been fortunate in getting Gibson to build a number of special order models for us.

Deering Banjos

The Deering Banjo Company builds more banjos than all the other North American makers combined. They are by far the most commonly used professional banjo.

Our banjos are setup with standard action at 5/64 and head tension tuned to G#. Additional setup and capo spikes installed at no extra charge.

Deering Vega Bluegrass Senator Banjo

Custom built for The Twelfth Fret, this model adds a resonator back to the famous Vega Senator model. This back adds the snap and power needed for Bluegrass but without the heavy weight of a standard bluegrass banjo. The lightweight spun-brass ring offers a tone and voice very similar to the famous John Hartford model but at roughly 1/3 of the price.

Deering Goodtime Banjos

Deering began the "Goodtime" experiment 25 years ago as a way to offer a fully US-made banjo for a low "off-shore" price. The experiment blossomed into a diverse selection of innovative banjos that sound great. And, Goodtime Banjos are far better made than any of their "off-shore" competitors.

Goodtime Americana 12 Inch Open Back Banjo

Late in the 19th century, 12" banjos were common. Old-time players seek them out for their rich and bassy tone. Early in 2015, Deering released this new 12" version of their famous Goodtime banjo and it has been a huge hit with the clawhammer players. The lovely warm tone is further enhanced by the Renaissance head used on this model

Goodtime Solana Six Open Back, Six-String Banjo

If you can play guitar...now you can play banjo too! Instantly! Deering had the foresight to experiment with nylon strings; they really struck gold with this model. Six string banjos are normally quite harsh sounding but this Nylon-string version sounds warm and fat. Plus, Deering added a pickup so the banjo can be used at exceedingly high volumes without feedback.
